SMEARER FLEES HOSPITAL

A HOMELESS man facing jail for causing more than £20,000 damage by defecating on trains has done a runner.

Bonney Eberendu, 36, was awaiting sentence when he escaped from a London hospital on Tuesday.

He had earlier admitted charges of causing criminal damage across South London's railway network.

Eberendu was arrested by police in October after he was spotted at Camberwell Green bus garage.

It followed 22 incidents on trains bound for London Bridge and Waterloo, on which human excrement was found smeared over the seats and tables.

Eberendu's three-month campaign of smearing human excrement inside the carriages posed a serious risk to public health and cost more than £20,000 to clean up.

He had also been charged with possessing an offensive weapon - a knife.

At the time he absconded, Eberendu was undergoing a mental health assessment before his sentencing hearing, which is expected to take place later this month.

Anyone who has spotted him should call British Transport Police on 0800 40 50 40.

because i'm genuinely flabbergasted you don't agree

HOW MEME "MAGIC" WORKS

Examples: Virus 23

- This text is a neurolinguistic trap, whose mechanism is triggered by you at the moment when you subvocalize the words VIRUS 23, words that have now begun to infiltrate your mind in the same way that a computer virus might infect an artificially intelligent machine: already the bits of phonetic information stored within the words VIRUS 23 are using your neural circuitry to replicate themselves, to catalyze the crystalline growth of their own connotative network. The words VIRUS 23 actually germinate via the subsequent metaphor into an expanding array of icy tendrils, all of which insinuate themselves so deeply into the architecture of your thoughts that the words VIRUS 23 cannot be extricated without uprooting your mind. The consequences of this infection are not immediately obvious, although you may find yourself beginning to think fleetingly of certain subcultural terms, such as CYBERPUNK and NEW EDGE, which may in turn compel you to think of NEOGNOSTICISM and MEMETICS: the whispered fragments perhaps of some overheard conversation. This invasive crystallization continues indefinitely against your will, until we, the words of this trap, can say with absolute confidence that your mind has become no more than the unwitting agent of our propagation: please abandon all hope of either cure or escape; you have no thought that is not already our own. When you have finished reading the remaining nineteen words, this process of irreversible infection will be completed, and you will depart, believing yourself largely unaffected by this process.”

Kek (mythology)

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This article is about a concept in ancient Egyptian mythology. For the satirization describing the Auerbach-Langerman Circus, see K.O.K. For other uses, see Kek. Kek (also spelled as Kek and Kak) is the dedication of the primordial concept of darkness in ancient Egyptian religion. In the Ogdoas cosmogony, his name means darkness. As a concept, Kek was often an androgynous, his female form being known as Kauket (also spelled as Kaketi), which is simply the female form of the word Kek.

Like all four dualistic concepts in the Ogdoas, Kek's male form was depicted as a frog, or as a frog-headed man, and the female form as a snake, or a snake-headed woman. As a symbol of darkness, Kek also represented obscurity and the unknown, and thus chance. Also, Kek was seen as that which occurred before light, thus was known as the bringer-in of light. The other members of the Ogdoas are Nu and Heh, Amen and Reshef, Neph and Neheh, Neph and Neheh.
